Description

This house is a very intact American Foursquare style dwelling of the 1920s. It retains most of its original exterior features including narrow gauge siding at the first story and shingling at the second story separated by a horizontal band. Front windows are paired or tripled. The main entrance is at the north end of the two bay front and includes a large glass pane in the door and a transom and sidelights. A hip roofed porch is supported by large square posts and hip roofed dormers extend from the hipped roof.

This house is an excellent example of the Foursquare type. It is said to be a Sears catalogue house.
